ELA BUZZ

Ever since Aisha had turned ten, her parents let her walk her little brother Jabari to the tabletop game store on the corner. The owner was a family friend who kept an eye on them when they visited.

At first, Aisha only went out of love for Jabari—and because it was a huge responsibility and show of trust that she was proud to have earned.

But the store was actually loads of fun! There were thousands of models and figurines of adventurers and fantasy creatures. Those were Jabari's favorites. Aisha's were the guidebooks and detailed maps for inventing worlds and storylines. With some creativity, these games had endless possibilities!

Unfortunately, Aisha's friends wouldn't be caught dead here. Aisha learned that the hard way when she mentioned visiting the weekend prior.
